

Center for Language Studies

The Center for Language Studies fosters a community of like-minded individuals interested in researching and exploring other cultures in a way that is only possible through a deep knowledge of the language of these cultures. The Center encompasses two unique units - the Center for Languages Studies (CLS) and World Languages and Cultures (WLC). CLS supports and promotes the work done by all language faculty and students at Brown whereas WLC is the home department for Arabic, ASL, English for International Graduate Students, Hindi, Nahuatl, Persian, Turkish, Swahili, Urdu, and Yoruba.

The Center supports the teaching and learning of all languages at Brown and promotes the importance of intercultural competence in our global society. By offering opportunities to reflect on teaching practices, to develop professionally and to stay updated regarding research in language pedagogy, we remain committed to helping faculty and graduate students excel. We foster a community of undergraduates who are invested in a sincere and critical dialogue with others by learning languages that represent a variety of cultures and traditions. We coordinate events and professional development for faculty and graduate students as well as co-curricular learning opportunities for undergraduates.

For additional information please visit the Center's website at: <https://cls.brown.edu/> (<https://www.brown.edu/academics/language-studies/>)

Intercultural Competence Concentration Requirements

The Center for Language Studies' (CLS) Certificate in Intercultural Competence acknowledges that in an ever more interconnected world and society, with more opportunities for collaboration as well as situations of conflict, students need to understand and respect other cultures. By approaching language study, area studies courses and experiential learning through a critical lens focused on developing intercultural competence, students prepare themselves for a future after Brown working with people from all over the world, be it in industry, business, the university or in social justice work, anywhere where multicultural and multilingual groups work together.

Experiential Learning Component

Students are encouraged to consult with the CIC Faculty Advisor to gain approval before the start of the Experiential Learning Component. Students may however gain credit after completion with appropriate approval. Students will need to keep track of time and present documentation from a supervisor of hours completed. Students choose one of the following experiential learning opportunities:

International internships require use of the language students are studying for the language study elective and must include engagement with the community. The internship must be of at least 4 weeks and equal a total of 60 hours.

Study Abroad in a country in which a language other than English is used, must be at a university where courses are offered in the language the student has chosen for their language study elective, must include enrollment in at least one course taught in the language the student has chosen for their elective and must be for a period of one semester or at least 4 weeks in the summer.

Domestic internships require use of and significant exposure to the language the student is studying for their language study elective. Students will intern for one semester or at least 4 weeks in the summer for a minimum of 60 hours.

Total Credits 4.5

For a list of languages currently participating in the certificate, please see the CLS Website (<https://cls.brown.edu/certificate-intercultural-competence/>). Students may not pursue this certificate in the same language as their concentration.

Courses

American Sign Language

SIGN 0100. American Sign Language I, II.

An immersive approach using authentic communication inside and outside of the classroom will be used to develop introductory communicative skills in American Sign Language. Authentic materials from diverse sources will provide an overview of the American Deaf community. Basic media literacy skills will be taught.

This is the first half of a year-long course whose first semester grade is normally a temporary one. Neither semester may be elected independently without special written permission. The final grade at the end of the course work in SIGN 0200 covers the entire year and is recorded as the final grade for both semesters.

ARAB 0110. Egyptian Arabic.

This course will introduce students to one of the major colloquial variants of contemporary Arabic. The native language of Egyptian citizens, used predominantly in everyday communication, has long since become widely understood throughout the Arab world, since popularized by the media and pop culture. The beginning oral proficiency that students will acquire in this course, by examining a range of sources, from textbooks to short stories, movies, social media posts and personal accounts by guest-speakers, and by practicing conversation in class, will facilitate their communication with native speakers of Arabic in a variety of informal situations. Prerequisite: ARAB 200. Enrollment limited to 18.

ARAB 0120. Intensive Summer Arabic.

This intensive summer course (Equal to ARAB 0100 and ARAB 0200) is an introductory course designed to build basic listening, speaking, writing, and reading skills in Arabic. MSA is the medium of formal oral and written communication used throughout the Arab world, and the course will mainly focus on this form of the language. This course will introduce essential colloquial vocabulary and grammar necessary for understanding and conducting simple acts of communication with native speakers.

ARAB 0200. First-Year Arabic.

Builds listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills, at the low intermediate level of Arabic proficiency. Five contact hours per week, with an emphasis on grammar and communication, plus written, audio, and video assignments outside of class. This is the second half of a year-long course. Students must have taken ARAB 0100 to receive credit for this course. If ARAB 0100 was taken for credit then this course must be taken for credit; if taken as an audit, this course must also be taken as an audit. Exceptions to this policy must be approved by both the academic department and the Committee on Academic Standing. Enrollment limited to 18.

ARAB 0320. Intermediate Arabic.

This course (equal to ARAB 0300 and ARAB 0400) builds on the skills acquired in ARAB 0100 and ARAB 0200. In addition to al-Kitaab, Parts One and Two, coursework will incorporate poetry, prose, music, and films, to broaden your vocabulary, underpin complex grammatical norms, and increase your understanding of contemporary Arab culture. Colloquial usages are naturally integrated in conversation practice. This course will also introduce you to important figures and ideas associated with the cultural history and present of Arab societies. Elements of classical Arabic will be presented, preparing you to access the literary and cultural heritage of the Arab peoples.

ARAB 0400. Second-Year Arabic.

Develops listening, speaking, reading and writing skills at the intermediate level of language proficiency through extensive use of various texts and multimedia. Promotes better understanding of Arabic cultural traditions. Five contact hours weekly, plus written, audio, and video assignments outside of class. Prerequisite: ARAB 0300. ARAB 0450A. Beginning Levantine Colloquial.

Parting from the solid foundation built in MSA during the first two years of Arabic studies, this course will accelerate students' advancement toward language proficiency by introducing them to Levantine Colloquial, one of the major varieties of Arabic. In preparation for class meetings, we will view and read a variety of media from the Levant. Oral communication and understanding Levantine cultures and contemporary societies will be the focus of our meetings. At the end of the semester, students will gain confidence to function in an ample variety of social and cultural environments and access a wider range of media.

ARAB 0500. Third-Year Arabic.

This course offers comprehensive training in listening, speaking, reading, and writing at the advanced proficiency level. It will accelerate students' advancement toward language and cultural proficiency by integrating the study of Modern Standard Arabic and Colloquial Arabic, the latter of which will be the main form of oral communication in class discussions. Thematic units will include selections from the classical and modern traditions of Arabic writing, contemporary film and media, and various art forms with the goal of broadening students' understanding of Arab societies and their cultures. Through this integrated approach, students will gain confidence to function in an ample variety of social and cultural environments and access a wider range of media. Prereq: ARAB0400 or equivalent

ARAB 0700. Advanced Arabic: Tales of the City.

The Arab city, current site of a major political upheaval, is the central theme of this integrated-skill language and culture course. Images of cities, as multifaceted as the people who inhabit them, animate cinema screens and daily news reports, inspire masters of writing, artists, and musicians, arouse political activism. By engaging the complex representation of the urban theme in contemporary discursive and art forms, this course will enhance students' understanding of the dynamics of urban politics and culture in the Middle East, while building a content-specific lexicon and advanced communicative ability. Prerequisite: ARAB 0600, or an equivalent. Enrollment limited to 12.

ARAB 0800. Advanced Arabic: Language & Culture through Cinema.

This integrated-skill language and culture course stresses oral interaction in class. We will view and discuss films from the Arab World as vehicles to understanding the cultural and linguistic diversity of Arabic-speaking countries. Our selection of films will focus on issues of economic inequality, family dynamics, and gender, as well as the effects of war and immigration on society. By engaging the complex representation of these themes in contemporary cinema, this course will enhance students' understanding of Middle Eastern culture, while building a content-specific lexicon and advanced communicative ability. Prerequisite: ARAB0600, or an equivalent. Enrollment limited to 12.

ARAB 0850. Advanced reading and composition in Arabic: Kalila wa-Dimna.

This course aims to introduce students with advanced proficiency in Arabic to Classical Arabic exemplified by the stories of Kalila wa-Dimna, one of the most popular medieval Arabic folk tales, told through a cast of personified animals. While written originally in Sanskrit in the fourth century CE, the Arabic translation of Ibn al-Muqaffa'—one of the most influential prose writers in the history of Arabic literature—is what made it a classic in Arabic. It also allowed it to travel to other parts of the globe through various translations based on Ibn al-Muqaffa's.

Students will also have an opportunity to engage with a modern version of the stories, by Munther Younes, developing further their ability to read critically authentic Arabic texts of different historical periods, sharpening their analytical skills, and expanding their perspective of the language evolution through the ages. Advanced level in Arabic is required.

ARAB 0950. Advanced Reading and Composition: Arabic Fiction in the West.

This course explores themes of exile, nostalgia, and identity in works written in Arabic by Arab authors living in the West. The course aims to improve the students' skills in critical reading and writing through studying and analyzing original texts in their linguistic, cultural and historical contexts. Students read short stories and novels in Arabic by writers including Houda Barakat, Hassouna Mosbahi and Abdul Hadi Saadoun. All readings and discussions in Arabic.

ARAB 1100. Love, Revolution and Nostalgia in Modern Arabic Poetry.

This course aims to introduce students to the most prominent Arabic poets of the 20th and 21st century. Students will strengthen their language skills while reading and discussing texts by major modern poets from the Middle East and North Africa, including Nizar Qabbani, Darwish and Adonis. Through the works of these poets, they will explore a range of themes from politics and oppression, to love and eroticism, personal freedom and women's liberation.

Conducted in Modern Standard Arabic; designed for students with advanced language skills. Prerequisite: Four years of Arabic, or by instructor permission.

ARAB 1990. Special Topics in Arabic Language, Literature, and Culture.

Advanced level integrated skill course focusing on specific reading and writing topics derived from the traditions and arts of the Arabic language. Course prerequisites include advanced capacity in Arabic grammar and reading comprehension. Enrollment limited to 10.

ARAB 1990B. Advanced Egyptian Arabic: Displacement and Diaspora in a Modernizing Egypt.

This is a course offered to students with at least six semesters of language study experience. Students must be comfortable with the script, sounds, structure and grammar of the language. The course will familiarize students with one of the major colloquial variants of contemporary Arabic. Egyptian Arabic is the dialect of Egyptian citizens and is used predominantly in everyday communication. Students will acquire proficiency by examining content-based sources related to its theme of displacement. Sources will range from books and articles to video clips, social media posts and accounts by speakers and guests.

CatalanCATL 0100. Introduction to Catalan Language and Culture.

Students in this course will learn the basics of Catalan, a language spoken by 10 million people. Its culture is internationally renowned in many fields, like cinema, literature, music, theatre, gastronomy, sports, and architecture. This course is designed to provide students with little or no knowledge of the Catalan language with the communicative skills they need, especially oral and cultural, to develop and manage any communicative circumstance, if they need to travel or study abroad in Barcelona or in any Catalan region where the language is spoken. Required: given the fact that this is a language course, students must attend two live online sessions each week, which are likely to be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2pm EST. The schedule may be subject to change based on the availability of students.

CATL 0200. Catalan Language and Culture.

An intermediate course which introduces students to Catalan culture and allows them to review and extend their knowledge of all basic patterns (e.g. grammar, vocabulary, phonetics, sociocultural norms) of the language. Students will develop their oral and written skills by describing, narrating, and presenting arguments. They will work with texts and audio-visual material that will provide them with a deeper understanding of Catalan literature, culture, and contemporary society. Classes will be conducted in Catalan. Therefore a basic knowledge of Catalan literature is a prerequisite or students may request the instructor's permission to take the course.

CATL 0300. Catalan Language and Culture.

This course continues to develop and strengthen students' proficiency in the Catalan language. The cultural component plays a central role in these classes, as a means to access diverse uses of the language within a cultural context. Varied cultural sources will be explored, such as Catalan cinema, music, artistic expressions, sociocultural elements and literature. These will play a role in enhancing the student's confidence in their knowledge of the Catalan language and the context in which it is inserted. Students can expect to develop their language skills further, and to be active agents in their learning process.

CATL 1910. Independent Study in Catalan.

An open content course, which may be offered each semester. Offered as an Independent Study, this course will be adapted to students' needs that are not currently covered by our curricular offerings.

English for InternationalsEINT 2100. Academic Discourse for Internationals.

This course develops the English skills of first-year international graduate students who are preparing to be teaching assistants. Students improve their listening comprehension and fluency in conversational interactions typical of academic settings. Areas of spoken English that are addressed include pronunciation, stress patterns, intonation, vocabulary, and structure. Instructor permission required.

EINT 2200. Academic Interactions.

This course develops the English language skills of first-year international graduate students who are preparing to be teaching assistants. Students improve their fluency and expression of complex ideas in a variety of linguistic situations typical of classroom interactions. Students also increase their control of vocabulary, pronunciation and listening comprehension when communicating with American undergraduates. Instructor permission required.

LANG 0710. Protest and Dissidence in Iran.

The anti-authoritarian Woman, Life, Freedom movement arose as a reaction to protests, incarceration and death in Iran in the fall of 2022. In this first-year seminar, you will learn about Iran, a country of 87 million people bordered by Iraq and Afghanistan. We will discuss historical events such as the 1979 Iranian Revolution and how they still affect Iran's relationship to the West. Through a broad selection of texts, film and art, we will explore topics that include corruption, authoritarianism, multiculturalism, race, social class, religion and gender relations in today's Iranian culture and society. LANG 0750. Identity and Languages in Contemporary Africa.

When you think of contemporary Africa, what's the first thing that comes to mind? IS it a megacity? Africa is the most rapidly urbanizing continent in the world. It is home to three of the world's megacities (populations of 10 million). It is also home to one-third of the world's languages and over 2000 languages are spoken in Africa. What is daily life within them like, and what kinds of linguistic, cultural, economic, and political roles do they play in our world? In this interdisciplinary class, we'll look for answers to these questions in articles and mixed media, including Instagram posts, op-eds, TED Talks, YouTube music videos, sci-fi short stories, documentary photography, and more. What we'll find might surprise you. Along the way, we'll also do some critical reflection and self-examination: what shapes the ways we think about Africa and why?

LANG 0760. Language and Film Discourse in Africa.

Africa is home to one of the biggest film industries in the world, Nollywood. In this course, we will watch and analyze selected scenes in films. We will also examine the language used in films to express speech acts (that is, an utterance considered an action) such as advice, apologies, compliments, gratitude, greetings, refusals, requests, and sympathies. Moreover, we will analyze the linguistic, contextual, and social phenomena in African films made in African languages within the past five years. In addition, we will consider language, context, power relations, proverbs, political discourse, and medical discourse in the African film ecology.

LANG 1000A. Living in Translation: Trans/national Mobilities and Multilingualism.

Current and historical voluntary, forced, and induced migrations demand we reflect on how we think about languages, as well as the persistent changes we make to language. Translation is one of the changes we encounter daily. This course discusses the ways that thinking in/of translation alters and facilitates our reading, writing, and interpretation. It considers multilingualism alongside the cannibal, a disruptor and figure of linguistic alterity. Our aim is to think about the authors' and texts' trans/national movements as we generate questions about mobilities, language, and decoloniality, as well as how they manifest in cultural productions. Materials include novels, short stories, essays, musical recordings, visual art, and film. Authors include Edwidge Danticat, Haruki Murakami, Emine Sevgi Özdamar, Binyavanga Wainaina, and Gloria Anzaldúa among others, with texts in transit between Brazil, Germany, Haiti, Japan, Kenya, Malaysia, Puerto Rico, Turkey, etc.

LANG 1200. Archipelagic Thinking with Global Literatures.

Islands and archipelagos have long been disparaged for their openness, blending, and fluidity. Around the globe today, this form of continental thinking continues to provoke nationalist policies and efforts to curb human migrations and refugee movements. This course reconsiders these ideas. In learning to think archipelagically, we will read and watch work by Edwidge Danticat, Rosario Ferré, Isaac Julien, Craig Santos Perez, Ai Weiwei and more. This will include discussing how practices of language, translation, and multilingualism are lived and theorized archipelagically.

LANG 1800. Capstone Seminar in Intercultural Competence.

This course serves as the final capstone course for the Certificate in Intercultural Competence. Students will connect the skills, attitudes and knowledge developed throughout the course work and experiential learning component of the Certificate to their future goals. Students will work on synthesizing all components of the Certificate through weekly discussions, simulations and case studies. Research topics and group discussions are designed to continue conversations that extend the work that began in the required foundation course LANG0800 The Theory and Practice of Intercultural Competence. Students will prepare a multi-modal presentation, and have the option of presenting a portfolio in a digital format, a podcast or a video, of the work they have completed along their journey towards intercultural competence. Students will participate in a public presentation session in order to share their work and engage the wider language-learning community on-campus.

TKSH 1100. Introductory Ottoman Turkish I.

This course is open to both graduate and undergraduate students. This introductory course aims to develop learners' Ottoman Turkish reading and understanding skills written in the Ottoman Turkish (Arabo-Persian) alphabet. Students will practice reading Ottoman Turkish starting with simple separate words, and they will gradually move to studying longer texts. Simultaneously, students will review the main grammatical features of Ottoman Turkish including simple Arabic and Persian grammatical elements in the texts. Students will also practice how to solve problems encountered in the texts with use of dictionaries. In this introductory course students will mainly study the printed Ottoman Turkish texts published after the Second Constitutional Era (1908), and then they will be introduced to the texts of the 'New Ottoman Turkish' era (1839-1908). Minimum B2 level of Turkish is required for this class. Please email me if you have any questions about your Turkish language level.
