

The Division of Master's and Professional Programs

The Division of Master's and Professional Programs, in coordination with academic departments, delivers nearly 40 master's degree programs across residential, professional and online formats. These programs embody Brown's commitment to research, collaborative learning, and interdisciplinary, student-centered education. Within the Division, the School of Professional Studies oversees the University's professional master's programs and portfolio of short programs.

The Division's Center for Master's Student Excellence serves as a central hub for our 2,000+ master's students, providing community building, professional development opportunities and streamlined access to essential resources.